"In the wake of the devastation from Storm Éowyn, this council recognises the hard work by council and emergency workers across the county in clearing debris, returning electricity and ultimately keeping people safe. Due to the increasing prevalence of extreme weather events Carlow County Council should also expand on its emergency weather response by identifying and locating potential community hubs to support people in the event of continued power outages, by sourcing back up generators to assist local Irish Water pumping stations or other essential services and consider any other necessary measures to ensure people have access to basic amenities."
